Part II: Comments on specific draft paragraphs and sections

All comments on specific draft paragraphs are welcome. They can be about e.g. scope, content and clarity. Proposing a concrete alternative text or table is also possible. For the paragraphs in separate sections, separate forms are used for providing and collecting comments (see below).

A. Introduction (paragraphs 24.1-24.5)

General comment	Click here and start typing.
24.1	Item b line 1 should read ...supply of fixed capital not foxed capital
*24.2	The way lines 1 and 2 are written suggests that the policies of government alone impact upon households, whereas in a mixed economy not to mention the free market economy the financial and non financial sectors even the rest of the world have a significant impact on households.

* Insert rows in this Word table for each paragraph on which you wish to comment.

B. Sub-sectoring households (paragraphs 24.6-24.21)

24.6	You should have indicated as to how these sub sectorings were derived...population census data or household expenditure surveys. I am inclined to suggest population census data as a benchmark, supported by Household expenditure surveys done every 2 years or so.
*24.14	Income data is usually very questionable insofar as household surveys are concerned. Most households under declare their incomes while others genuinely forget such sources as the occasional remittance or property income such as interest or dividends. We feel therefore that the level of consumption is a much better sectoring device than income. Also the use of the production perspective (24.6) should give a good indication of the type of incomes earned by households.

Part III. Other specific comments

You are welcome to make other specific comments. To assist you in doing so, the following points are provided as a guide to the types of points on which you might wish to comment. Note, though, that you are not restricted to commenting on only these points.

1. Are there any other considerations or options for sub-sectoring households that you would wish to see included?
2. Are there any other aspects of household production that should be elaborated in the chapter?
3. Are there any other references you would suggest including?
